Tell us about the magic or lack there of apple cider vinegar

What is apple cider vinegar?
- Apple cider vinegar is a type of vinegar made from yeast, bacteria and apples!
- It is a probiotic, rich in antioxidants and contains acetic acid. Can apple cider vinegar prevent/cure cancer?
- Unfortunately, there isn’t food that can prevent or cure cancer.
- There was a study showing that acetic acid (a component of apple cider vinegar) can help stop the growth of cancer. However, in this study the acetic acid was applied directly to cancerous cells, and that is impossible to do in human subjects.
- Another avenue where apple cider vinegar has been mentioned with cancer is the alkaline diet. In which the thought is that apple cider vinegar will lower the acidity of the body and help destroy cancer cells. However, it is very difficult to change our body’s pH since it already regulates it on its own! Other nutritional implications!
- A few studies have shown that apple cider vinegar can help lower blood sugar levels. Don’t use it instead of medications. There is a lot of buzz about apple cider vinegar helping with weight loss. A study found that patients who took apple cider vinegar and ate in a calorie deficit lost more weight than those who did not use apple cider vinegar. It is important to remember that apple cider vinegar did not do this alone. The negatives associated with apple cider vinegar are that the acidity can hurt the enamel on your teeth and may cause heartburn.
